Jackie Marshall has worked in higher education for 36 years, beginning her career as a full-time faculty member for Lorain Business College (now known as Ohio Business College) in 1982. She has held the positions of Faculty, Campus Director, Director of Education and currently serves as the Corporate Director of Education. She provides guidance on the U.S. Department of Education, Ohio State Board of Career Colleges and Schools, Ohio Department of Higher Education and accreditation compliance issues. Along with her experience in proprietary education, she holds a Bachelor’s degree in Business Education from Bowling Green State University and a Master’s degree in Educational Administration from Ashland University. She became interested in the aha! Process, Inc., Bridges Out of Poverty program about 12 years ago. In higher education, there are many students who currently live or have been raised in a life of poverty. With Bridges Out of Poverty training, she was able to gain a better understanding of those who were raised in poverty and it gave her the “aha” moment. This training made her a better person in the classroom and much less judgmental. Jackie is a past board member of the Ohio Michigan Association of Career Colleges and Schools for ten years. She is the current board president for the Center for Cultural Awareness in Sandusky. She is a certified trainer for the aha! Process, Inc., presenting Bridges Out of Poverty to various individuals, organizations and communities since 2015.

Jack Slavinski's purpose in life is to help develop and train leaders in every role to most effectively influence themselves, their teams and their organizations and to help them be the most positive, fulfilling and resilient version of themselves and for their teams. Working for global companies such as GE, Citi, Xerox and TIAA-CREF in senior leadership roles, he has a deep appreciation for what it takes to influence and transform an organization through leadership. Jack also understands how to best manage projects in complex, challenging and diverse organizations. For seven years, he has taught many courses as a senior lecturer professor (adjunct) at The Ohio State University at the undergraduate, graduate and masters levels. All courses involve emphasis on leadership, life/soft skills and related behaviors. One of the courses he teaches is an advanced course on leadership and organizational change. Jack provides leadership consulting in the areas of business, education, athletics and ministry. He is currently working in over 60 school districts at all levels and helped over 1,000 coaches, teachers and student athletes. Jack uses a systematic and highly proven leadership/organizational development system called Lead4Influence. He has worked with Jon Gordon, an author and motivational speaker, to develop leadership and team assessments. Over the past 18 months, he has spent over 2,000 hours researching and developing proven resiliency building methods to proactively teach and train individuals dealing with stress, anxiety and forms of depression.
